THE WATERGATE FOLLIES

Incredibly, the press is of the opinion that President Nixon stands in some political danger as a result of the Senate investigation of the Watergate and "Plumber" operations. A good close look at the men who claim to be sitting in judgment on him is quite instructive.

One of the members of the "Watergate Committee" is the only living American who ever tried to seize a state government by force of arms. This is Senator Talmadge. When, early in 1947, the governor-elect of Georgia died, Talmadge (then a private citizen) decided to prevent the inauguration of the lieutenant-governor. With some state troopers he marched on the state capitol, seized it forcibly, and held it for several months in defiance of the legitimate governor. Georgia became a national laughingstock. Had Talmadge not belonged to a Democratic Party faction opposed to President Truman's, he might have gotten away with it. And this man has the utter nerve to accuse President Nixon of arrogating to himself extra-Constitutional powers!

Save for Senator Weicker, all members of this committee were in the 88th Congress when two major Constitutional crises took place: the Civil Rights Bill and the Gulf of Tonkin Resolution. Four of these men voted against the Civil Rights Bill (Senator Inouye and Representative Montoya, with their ancestries and constituencies, could not do other than support it) and all of them supported the American invasion of Vietnam. This deserves capitals: SENATOR ERVIN PUT HIS PRESTIGE AS AN ALLEGED EXPERT ON THE CONSTITUTION ON THE LINE IN FAVOR OF THE PROPOSITIONS THAT A BLACK MAN IS THE POLITICAL INFERIOR OF A WHITE MAN, AND THAT THE PRESIDENT CAN MAKE WAR WHEREVER AND WHENEVER HE PLEASES!

With men like these sitting in judgment on him, President Nixon has nothing whatever to worry about.

by Robert Bryan Lipton (suggested for review by Ronald Melton)

There is a plot common among the more poorly written s-f novels. The Battle of Britain is being reenacted, see, and the RAF can't hold out for long.

Actually, it's not really the Battle of Britain. It's the Humanoid world of Tau Vwexxax 3, and it's being invaded by some horrid monsters who pass their spare time drooling over beautiful girls. As the story opens, they've drooled over all but one girl, and that one is about to be caught.

Fortunately, in the nick of time, an Earthman enters (almost invariably Anglo-Saxon, even when the author's name is Ramon Felipe San Juan Mario Silvio Enrico Smith Heathcourt-Brace Sierra y Alvarez del Rey y de los Uerdes and he is published as "Lester Del Rey"). The Earthman, as I was saying, enters, ties the monsters' eyes in knots, and saves the world.

That's just the sort of story that Phillip Jose Farmer, usually one of the most talented writers of s-f, has written.

The name of the book is The Gates of Time (Belmont B50-717: 50¢). As the story opens, Roger Two Hawks, an American Iroquois, is flying out to bomb Festung Ploesti, Hitler's major source of oil during World War Two. Some strange things happen, and he finds himself catapulted into an alternate universe where the American continents do not exist beyond a few archipelagos, but the Euro-Afrasian land mass is about the same as in our world.

Now, the leading Central European power, Lithuania (under a different name), is attacking the entire world. (No, I'm not joking. Every nation named is either attacked by and/or has war declared upon them by Lithuania.)

I hope that I won't have to give a further plot summary. The book is cliched, inaccurate, and idiotic. A few of the things that disturb me the most are:

1. the conflict is resolved by deus ex machina.
2. the prologue lets you know that the hero and the civilization of the Good Guys (who, naturally, live in Britain) will be saved.
3. The removal of the American continents and a warm period in the Earth's climate does not seem to have affected the outline of the Eurasian continent to any great degree. It is stated in the book (no, I'm not going to tell you the page - that would mean reading the damned thing again) that the outlines are substantially the same. A missing New World should cause the level of the oceans to fall by a substantial amount, linking Italy with Tunisia, Sweden with Denmark, etc. And what happened to the various plates of the American continents anyway? Did God forget something?*
4. Two Hawks, who holds a degree in a branch of linguistics, decides that the people who live in what are our Rumania and Ukraine are actually Amerindians because their language is a member of the Iroquois group.

There is a law in linguistics that, in an isolated, non-literate culture, words will be dropped for new ones at the rate of 17% of the total vocabulary per millenium. (I. e., the Old English "aetheling" was dropped for "knight".) Estimating 10,000 BC as the date when the divergence between the cultures of the world of this book and of our world became noticeable, calculate the number of words that Two Hawks could recognize. Hint: Old English ca. 850 AD sounds like a Scotsman speaking German, and one of the few words that survives from the original Indo-European language (ca. 2500 BC) is the word for water, which is "agua" in Spanish, and appears in such place names as "Argau", "Aix-la-Chapelle", and the "Aa River".

In addition, such things as Grimm's law, which covers the fact that lower consonants evolve to higher consonants, and eventually to diphthongs, and vowel shifts, which can run backwards as well as forwards, tend to snarl up language origins even more. If Two Hawks can recognize two languages as being related after twenty thousand years of

* - He didn't forget everything. In this world a major religion centers about the worship of a martyred Son of God, born many centuries ago of a virgin - in Ireland! Two Hawks' Irish-American co-pilot, otherwise totally at a loss in this new world, is most gratified by this development. - JB

I'LL BET YOU THOUGHT THAT 1971EC WAS OVER!

Technically, it is. The last moves, for "Fall 1913", were published in GRAUSTARK #291. A review of the game, with a supply center chart, was printed in #292. But some late comments by John Leeder, who was playing Italy at the game's end, should find some place somewhere. Owing to our presently tight situation with regard to space in GRAUSTARK (see #290 for details), here they are:

"My experience in 1971EC illustrates the undesirability of one rule which most Gamesmasters employ in their houserules: that is, the rule that unordered units, when dislodged, are not allowed to retreat but are annihilated. My predecessor as Italy, was holding his own under heavy enemy attack when he missed a couple of moves. Most of the units protecting his homeland, being unordered, were unsupported, dislodged and removed. Thus the position I took over was indefensible and quickly overrun. If those unordered units had been allowed to retreat, Italy would have had some chance of putting up a spirited defence and the game would have been more interesting.

"I do not mean this as a criticism of GRAUSTARK's houserules and their application in this game. I mean to point out to all Gamesmasters that this particular rule is discriminatory. It places a player in double jeopardy; he loses both position and the actual unit. It is especially hard on standby players - if unordered units were allowed to retreat, a standby player would have a better chance of having a viable position to take over. I urge all Gamesmasters to rethink their position on this rule."

Unfortunately, this rule about attacked unordered units being removed is not alterable at the discretion of individual Gamesmasters. It is part of the rules of Diplomacy themselves. (Copyright Games Research Inc., 501 Harrison Ave., Boston, Mass. 02118.) Unless a support is specifically ordered by another, active, player, any attacked unit of an unordered country must be removed. Aside from this rule, suppose it were allowed to retreat - who would determine the direction of the retreat?

1971EC - PRESS RELEASES

NEW YORK (IDP): Rumors are running rampede that great herds of Bare Ents are approaching New York from the West. It is not sure whether the will come via Canada or Ohio, but one thing that is for sure, they smell and they eat alot. It is also rumored that they will be mate hunting, But the leading authority, Bob Lipless states that in fact they will be bring along their mates, and they might even try a little swapping on the way. He also noted, however, that they are still very dangerous and should be approached with great care.

CITY SEWERS (BOAST): It has been noted, that the exspected arrivial of the great Herb Barents, is not being taken vdry lightly. It seems that the city has decided to block all avenues that he would most likely take, ie the sewer, and have them well guarded.

ZOOLAND (STENCH): It has been noted that the trip planed by the flying Dutchie Boy is in fact about to take place. He will use no vehicle of any sort, but will fly all the way to New York. Watch for him as he passes over head your city. It is a thrill that you would not want to miss!

EDITORIAL (PRESS WRITERS): Ok you all stupid writers of press I want to make one thing very clear, that is to say that there is a tradition in diplomacy, not to steal other peoples charactors and press ideas. I have seen in many different games, including OWII and what now, things that were born and belong to 71 EC. Show some respect and stop your stealing of another man's good idea! Do you understand? If not I'll send my wife after you, since they are her ideas!

●DESSA (Ides of Ides): The Bessarabian 333rd B. S. armored division was completely liquidated today by a peasant uprising. The Russian peasantry, led by none other than the notorious (hold your noses, boys) Evan Jones, were alarmed by the massive role that Britain is playing in current European politics. The peasants then marched into Bessarabia itself, i. e., the Last Straw.

This is

DULCIGNO (December 24, 1938): Montenegrin troops landed here in the first amphibious invasion in World War 1½. King Evan I (and hopefully the last) led the Moronian Vampirial Guard in a vicious defense of Moronia. But, just as the Guard was about to turn the tide, Montenegrin King Elmo XXX marched (crawled?) into battle yelling, "Goo goo, dada, ga-ga, kill Evan." (Translated, of course)

Finally, in the center of the battlefield, the two kings met. Evan yelled: "Moronia for Morons!"

At this point, Elmo bit Evan on the toe, and Evan went off screaming, "It's not fair, I didn't know he was gonna hurt me!"

Dulcigno has fallen.

CORFU (October 10, 1938): Emperor Anrileo called the Second Annexed Allies' Council. Queen Melanie of the Dodecanese Islands was there and so were Czar Nicholas of the World-Famous Trans-Caucasia and Barsto Khan of Bessarabia.

"Fellow Annexed Allies: I suppose you are wondering why I called you here today. We need a rapid reformation of our position.

"For one thing, the positions of our British allies in Deutschland are threatened by the traitorous Sissiens, the Bohemians Royale and the Tyrolians. The World-Famous Trans-Caucasian Army is lost somewhere in Turkestan and the Russian peasants are penetrating into Bessarabia. And last, and most definitely least, the Montenegrins are reconquering Montenegro.

"Our position requires immediate stabilization. Barsto, you bomb Dulcigno harbor with ICBF's; Melanie, detach half of your islands and bottle the Montenegrin fleet. That should take care of them. Nick - your army may as well keep on its way, but allow the 2nd Border Guards Squad to land in Holland. They can then retake Maastricht and force the Sissiens to turn back. Evan, go to your room (Room 6); no seriously, take a trip to Prague; that'll take care of the Bohemians Royale.

RHODES (Point of Information): In case anyone's wondering how the Dodecanese Islands can be in so many places at the same time, it's that whenever they execute landfull, they become part of the land and reappear in their original spot.

"I don't know what you mean. Now identify yourself," replied the officer.

"That's easy. I'm me. But you are who?" answered Firefly, and as the two argued back and forth, a disappointed Pinky walked to the officer's rear and slipped his leg into the officer's hand. Realizing he held the limb, the Soviet soldier dropped it. Pinky repeated the process, to be met by a second rebuke. After an unsuccessful third try, Pinky set the officer's cap on fire. OUTER BULGARIA (10/15/02): Austrian officials stormed into Bulgaria and captured the small city of Petrich. They were defended from the Turks by massive troop concentrations in neighboring Greece and Serbia. It is not known yet what the officials intend doing in Bulgaria.

OUTER BULGARIA (11/22/02): Hundreds of Austrian citizens were invited to the unveiling of Petrich. They were all shocked when the officials revealed a zoo! But this was no ordinary zoo. Thousands of rare Saber-Tooth Neigers, a few stray Dunc-Bounds, an RBL or two, and to the surprise of many a brand new animal was there. A whole section of the zoo had been appropriated to a colony of Rayrillas. Rayrillas are a wierd type of ape the was discovered less than a year ago in southern Italy.

The caretaker of this new enterprise is that old-time captured Russian general, Gen. Michael Davidodovich, or to his Austrian friends Mike "Honey" Fritz.

Mr. Fritz was overwhelmed when the French, who knew about the szoo more than a week ago, sent over none other than the Sheriff of Nottingham, which the Frogs capture in southeast England. But the Austrian officials, because of their close ties to the English, sent the Sheriff back to Yorkshire, C. O. D.

73.2b - LATE PRESS RELEASES

SAN FRANCISCO (General Latvian & Estonian Equestrian Press): The U. S. govt. announces press solidarity with the nations of France and Russia. Otherwise we shall be remembered only as - ugh! - players!

SO. S. F. (GLEEP): Praise God for the beauty and the wonder of this world - then get off your ass and help make it even better. The quiet activists will have achieved greatness while the noisy squabblers continue to squabble.

There is no magic cure-all, folks. It's all up to you and me. Get with us now - 'cause we just won't have the time or patience for you later.

BERKELEY, CALIF. (GLEEP): It's true, folks! We did manage to graduate from Yale and are about to attend Law School in this, our new headquarters in three months. And once I study international law...

WASHINGTON (URRP): The Bureau of Usually Reliable Sources, International Travelers, and Intelligence Spokesman has revealed the last words spoken by Kent State student Alison Krause to an unidentified fellow-victim just before the National Guard opened fire on student demonstrators on 4 May 1970. According to a BURSITIS agent on the scene, she said, "Praise God for the beauty and the wonder of this world - then get off your ass and help make it even better...There is no magic cure all, folks. It's all up to you and me. Get with us now - 'cause we just won't have the time or patience for you later....Aaaaahhhhhhhh!"
